Speaker's Biography

Murray Giesbrecht has spent the past decade in non-profit management roles, including more than six years as Director of the Adult Centre for Employment Readiness Training, and member of the Regina Food Bank management team.

Murray has worked with many great community partners, sponsors, government departments, and colleagues, all of whom have lent their passion and expertise to create unique and innovative community-based adult education programming.

Murray's primary work focuses have been the creation of economic opportunities and labour market attachments for Aboriginal people, and workplace literacy training to assist new Canadians to develop skills and abilities to be successful in the Canadian workplace.

Murray is a graduate of the University of Regina, where he also played basketball. He is married to Crystal and lives in Regina.
